Notes from the Event

Jason Estes

- The only thing stopping you from infinite abundance is me - how do I work on you?
- Jason is committed to working together to find the best solutions to move forward. He asks himself "How do we work together towards a win-win-win faster?"
- Team humanity - everyone is on team humanity
- Everything is working together toward homeostasis including plants

- Biophotonics - Living light technology
- He wondered “How do I build this so I can create self-mastery?”
- His goal was always to meditate and have an enlightened conversation
- He asks himself “Can I be ready to be wrong if that be the case?”
- To create a successful company - if you build on truth and from an ethical perspective, it will last
- He looked at the physical world
- There is a natural rhythm - the question is “how do we live in that rhythm?”
- Cell phones kill biophotons
- Biophotons are how we communicate with ourselves and nature
- Every company or partnership is designed to be a collaborative ecosystem
- You need to know that if you want to find the right answer, you don’t need to have it already
- Self-mastery means “I don’t need you for anything but I want you so I can understand you”
- The source seed technology created trees that grew beyond what is logically possible
- Together we have all the solutions

Jeremy Hoffmann

- His work is around how we get the physical body to get back to harmony
- There is so much information and access, but we haven’t been given the tools to regulate ourselves
- He creates products to help us come back into harmony
- He plays with the concepts of wholeness and light
- He continues to apply the principles of how energetic systems work through business
- One of the roles that Jeremy plays is putting Jason’s ideas into systems and helping to share Jason’s work

Systems

- When you build systems, you can build up to a stable place
- When you have systems, it helps people know where they fit
- One of the most valuable things in the world is systems because it helps you find yourself in that system
- It doesn’t matter if you build the system wrong - if you are willing to attempt something, you now became a better you, which is the whole goal

Technology that is changing the world

- Imagine that you are in the womb
- The bed that Jason invented has heat, vibro acoustics, quantum field technology - biophotonic technology
- We are a delicate system and when we have the right resources, we are able to support the body to go back to a harmonious state
- Jason's team are doing studies to see how the technology works
- Jason believes in our lifetime we will be 300-1000 years old
- The bed doesn't cure you or treat you, it provides you with the resources to heal yourself
- We have all the answers within ourselves
