01:07:13 A. Romeo: Dear Dame Doria,

I remember when I was going through your magical exercise for the first time and you suggested to let subconscious thoughts to emerge without judgment. One thoughts that did emerge intrigued me. It was "stupid, stupid, stupid" that I went on writing on five lines in a row. I couldn't believe consciously that I wrote that and was believing myself to be that.

And yet, when I looked back at the way I was acting some of the times, I started to see the truth in what I wrote. I used to act in a stupid manner like when I would drink dozens of beer cans and could not find the way back home and other things that we best not imagine. And yet, I did not see the relationship between the fact that deep down I was thinking myself to be stupid and the fact that I was having an experience of lack of money. But bit by bit, I started to see the cause effect relationship between feeling stupid and deserving money - the deservability you talked about in your teachings...
